

Sean Quinn aka Twodogs

I moved from Perth to the Northern Rivers area 6 years ago with my two dogs and whatever else I could fit in my landcruiser. Prior to this I had always enjoyed photography but never really got the passion for it until I moved to the east coast.

I lived in a beautiful little secluded pocket of the Tweed directly opposite the river which had a diverse range of amazing wildlife. I first started taking images of the local bird life and then fell in love with sunrise and sunset photography. I soon realised I had an eye for landscape photography and that's when the passion really kicked in. Every morning and every evening I would walk with my two Staffy's to a secret little spot to capture the beautiful light and reflections on the water with nobody else around. I became known to the locals as Twodogs because my dogs went everywhere with me. I have now settled down in the coastal town of Casuarina with my beautiful partner and I am just as in awe of the beauty of the northern rivers area as I was 6 years ago.

I love capturing the beauty of nature, whether it be a dramatic sunrise or sunset, a soothing rainforest scene, the movement of the ocean or the Milky Way. Through my photography I attempt to capture Mother Nature at it's best and make you feel like you're standing in the image. I try to capture images that are a little bit different to most while still staying true to the scene in front of me. I am extremely passionate about staying true to myself and my images - I don't use photoshop and nothing has been removed or added into the images I produce. All of our images are a true representation of that place and the scene on that day.

I hope you enjoy our images as much as we do.
